

Sensei

The Japanese word Sensei means rebirth. Shedding the old and forming something new from the experience. A seasoned teacher or mentor is also often called a sensei without ever referring to himself that way.

We do not see ourselves as senseis, we rather support everyone who has taken the path to becoming one. We do this with a great deal of coordinated care and, if desired, with a «gentle push». This is all based on a Japanese philosophy interpreted in the western world as lean management.

With organizations, we always represent the customer's point of view and, above all, their values from their perspective. Customer-serving processes and employees should develop side-by-side. As advocates for the customers of our customers, we look forward to every successful change.
